About DRM

Disability Rights Maryland is Maryland's designated Protection and Advocacy agency, mandated to advance and defend the rights of people with disabilities.

DRM uses an array of advocacy strategies, including information and referral, direct representation, abuse and neglect investigations, technical assistance, community outreach and advocacy training.

DRM works together with people who have disabilities and strives to create a more integrated, just society with equal opportunities for individuals to participate in community life.

DRM requests input from Marylanders with disabilities to help us determine our advocacy priorities. We review and update our priorities annually.

We value your comments. Please let us know your concerns, needs, and ideas:
