

MTA MOBILITYLINK & COVID-19

A state of emergency and catastrophic health emergency was proclaimed by Governor Hogan on March 5, 2020, and renewed on March 17, 2020, to control and prevent the spread of COVID-19. The state of emergency affects MTA MobilityLink services.

HOW HAS MTA CHANGED ITS SERVICE?

On March 18, MTA reduced all local bus, light rail, metro, commuter bus services and paratransit or MobilityLink operations in an effort to slow spread of the virus and to keep drivers, riders and the public safe. Transit is limited to essential travel. Applications and recertification for MobilityLink has also changed.

WHAT REMAINS AVAILABLE?

Essential transit service, including MobilityLink, is available for:

- Meeting health care needs, including medical trips such as dialysis, chemotherapy, hospitals, clinics, and health and mental health appointments or services.
- Obtaining essential services, including trips to grocery stores, banks, pharmacies, food distribution centers or food banks.
- Providing essential services, including caring for other people with disabilities or family members, and those with essential jobs, including support workers for persons with disabilities.
- Ride requests for MobilityLink must be made by calling 410-764-8181 and you must be a certified rider.

HOW DO I CERTIFY FOR MOBILITY/LINK SERVICE?

New Applicants:

1. If you want to use the service, call the MobilityLink Certification office (8:30 – 4:00 M-F) at 410-764-8181, select 'Option 6' to request an application. You can also download an application from MTA's website at: <https://www.mta.maryland.gov/mobility>.
2. Complete your part of the application and send it to your health care or other professional to finish and return to you. Be sure that your health care provider gives you the original signed application.

To qualify for MobilityLink service, you must have significant limitations that prevent you from using other MTA services. For example, you cannot get to bus stops, cannot wait outside for long without shelter, cannot travel to transfer stops, cannot tolerate bus conditions without risk of seizure or psychiatric harm, or cannot independently travel.

During the COVID-19 State of Emergency, completed applications can be submitted via fax to 410-764-7526 or via email to MTACertification@mdot.maryland.gov.

All in-person assessments for MobilityLink are temporarily suspended and will be replaced with paper reviews and telephone interviews. You may receive temporary eligibility and be asked to go for an assessment when the State of Emergency ends.
